Marriages: Marriages are celebrated in the Church where the bride or groom is registered at. When a man and a woman plan to marry each other, they should contact a priest one year in advance and always before the wedding date is set, and before arranging for the reception hall. The engaged are required to attend a Marriage Preparation Course.

Please note: However, if this man or woman has previously gone through any form of civil or religious marriage with another person, the priest is not permitted to set a date for the wedding until the Bishop's office has been consulted. Questions are often being asked about marriages performed outside the Catholic Church by non-Catholic ministers. These are not valid marriages according to the teaching of the Catholic Church, but many can be rectified by simply consulting with your Parish priest to discuss the available options. Sometimes people make decisions without proper information, so if you wish, please contact your Pastor for details or call the Marriage Tribunal at 416-934-3400 ext 300.

A LIGHT IN DARKNESS

France owes its title of “Eldest Daughter of the Church” to Clovis and St. Clotilda, the first Frankish king to convert to Christ and his saintly wife. Upon Clovis’ death in 511, rule of his kingdom passed to his three sons, the eldest of which, Clodomir, was soon slain in battle.

Clodomir’s widow married her brother-in-law, Clotair, and Clodomir’s three sons went to live with their grandmother, St. Clotilda.

Fearful of the boys’ potential to revolt against his authority, their uncle Clotair tricked Clotilda into handing over the boys to him, whereupon he and his other brother murdered two of three boys (none yet old enough to rule.)

The surviving brother, Clodoald, was a mere eight years old. Exactly how Clodoald escaped his murderous uncles is unknown; some faith Christians, it seems, hid him and smuggled him out of the Frankish court. He grew up in the care of the Church, and when he came of age he shaved his head (his hair being a symbol of his status as royal heir), publicly renounced his claim to the Frankish throne, and entered the religious life. He began his religious life as a hermit under the tutelage of St. Severinus. Receiving a religious habit from the holy monk, Clodoald left the relative bustle of the hermitage outside of Paris for the quiet life in Provence. His hope was to serve Christ through prayer and quiet study.

Seeking Out Clodoald - Yet the holy man is rarely allowed to live his reclusivity. People learned of Clodoald’s hermitage and began to flock to him. He had already given away all of his possessions, save his monk’s habit. He performed miraculous healings and counseled those who came to him. One day, a poor man came begging; Clodoald gave him his only remaining possession: his religious habit. The next night, however, the beggar returned with the habit, which was glowing in the night. Locals witnessed the glowing garment, and word spread, inspiring more people to come and visit the saint.

In 551, Clodoald became a priest at the request of the people of Paris. He worked among them tirelessly; he even reconciled with his murderous uncles, who repented and returned to the Faith. Still desiring peace, Clodoald, or Cloud, as he became commonly called, withdrew from Paris to the town of Nogent with a small community of men who sought to, like him, withdraw from the corruptions of the Frankish court. They established a monastery on land donated by Cloud’s uncles; there St. Cloud lived out the rest of his short life. He died in the monastery he founded in 560, only 38 years old. His community did not die with him, however. It grew so that the town and monastery became interchangeable; Nogent became the modern-day town of Saint-Cloud in France.

And What of us? What are we to do when faced with evil done against us: We may either exact revenge or work with Our Lord to bring good out of evil.

In the murder of his brothers, Clodoald, St. Cloud, saw God’s mercy in his survival. He followed God’s call for him to bring human love and divine charity to a barbarian world which knew Him not. In his short, humble life, St. Cloud gave Christ to those who hungered for Him, not only in word and sacrament, but also in the sacrifice of his own life. We can see this in the story of his habit. He gave his whole life to his flock, sparing not the clothes he wore, and Christ used what he gave to illuminate the darkness of his age.

We, then, should take the path of St. Cloud, which was the path of Him who is “the Way, the Truth, and the Life” (John 14:6) and who declared He is the “Light of the world” (John 8:12). Christ, in his love, shared that role of light with us (Matthew 5:14-16), so that His light might pierce even the darkest corner of the world: the shadows in our hearts.

Like St. Cloud, we turn to Christ. Even in these dark days for our world and for the Church, it is in Him that we find our way, our light and our peace.
